Image Bandwidth Out

This report displays the outgoing bandwidth for images on the site. Website developers can use this report to identify images that could be compressed or reduced in size. In addition, site owners can use this report to spot potential image "leechers" - those who steal images or link to images for use on their own websites. Note: Many image optimization software products and services are available online. In general, these can greatly reduce the size of images without sacrificing image quality.

Note: This report can be added as a report item to a custom report. For more information on report items, refer to Understanding Report Items .
